

Rich User Interface Development

Â

The Web has become an important channel for companies to interact with customers, employees, partners and suppliers. And, as Web 2.0 technologies drive usability expectations, the need for rich internet application development continues to improve user adoption, makes training more efficient and will continue to provide users with a rich user experience bringing users/visitors back time and time again.

ERP Minds' design teams have experience developing Websites and Web applications since 2001 and include designers, content management and portal developers, flash designers and developers.
